The Urban-Rural Divide (Latency)

- Urban areas have large customer sets and are served by centralized data centers within their geographic boundaries. Most cities within a radius of 100 miles
- Rural areas will see an explosion of fiber builds in the next 5 years but can not be served by centralized data centers for low latency applications
- Average ping greater than 5ms within network. Cyber Sickness at >7ms
- The next digital divide will be not of speed but of latency
- Rural Areas may end up having access to remote work and distance learning and then have no access to tele-presence and virtual classrooms.
- Lack of MM creates a new Digital Divide
